TRUCKSAFE TO HOLD FIRST ANNUAL MEMBERS' FORUM

The trucking industry's leading business and risk management system, TruckSafe, will hold its first annual members' forum at the Silverwater Resort near Phillip Island in November.

To be held in conjunction with the ATA / ARTSA Technical and Maintenance Conference, the forum will give TruckSafe members and auditors the chance to attend critical sessions on the latest developments in best practice safety management.

Chief Executive of TruckSafe, Stuart St Clair, says the forum will provide a platform for members to find out how to improve their businesses.

"TruckSafe members are proven leaders in safety management and they are always looking at ways to improve their business models," Mr St Clair said.

"This forum will allow members to share information with each other, find out about the latest improvements in risk management and speak with auditors about what they will be focusing on and what concerns they have.

"It will be the perfect opportunity for TruckSafe members to ensure they are up-to-date with their accreditation and to find out ways to improve the day-to-day running of their businesses."

Mr St Clair said that holding the forum during the Technical and Maintenance Conference was a logical choice, as it gives TruckSafe members even more opportunity to improve how they operate.

"Many TruckSafe members already attend the Technical and Maintenance Conference each year. By combining the events members will be able to give additional information specifically relevant to TruckSafe accredited companies," Mr St Clair said.

The Truck Safe members' forum and ATA / ARTSA Technical and Maintenance Conference will be held at Silverwater Resort at San Remo, about an hour south east of Melbourne, between 15 - 17 November.

More information about the Technical and Maintenance Conference and the TruckSafe members' forum will be released as the event draws closer.
